

Exploring Co-operative & Mutual Housing in relation to the nation's housing needs

A CCMH Hearing, in partnership with Co-operatives South West and CDA (BRAVE Ltd)

Monday 6 April 2009, 2pm - 4.30pm
at The Coach House, 2 Upper York Street, Bristol BS2 8QN

In the current financial climate, many believe that co-operative and mutual forms of housing, where local communities own and control their own housing, should be an available option and part of a balanced community policy for the future.

Launched in 2008, the Commission for Co-operative & Mutual Housing is exploring the role that co-operative and mutual housing should play in national housing and community strategy, basing its recommendations on evidence assembled through research and evidence submitted to it.

Listening in the South West:

This CCMH hearing is an opportunity for those who are interested in co-operative and mutual housing to feed in their views. CCMH wants to hear the views of:

- people who live in co-operative or mutual housing
- people who have some other involvement in co-operative and mutual housing
- people who are not currently involved but who are interested

There is no charge for attending the event, but we are anticipating a high turnout.
